Domestic abuse and children

Domestic abuse affects children too. They can grow up more likely to suffer health problems, struggle at school, be involved in crime, use drugs and or have abusive relationships themselves. There's help available for everyone.

Adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) are potentially traumatic events, such as witnessing or living in household where domestic abuse occurs which can have negative, lasting effects on health and well-being.

Making a victim personal statement

A victim personal statement adds to the information you have already given to the police in your statement about the crime.

The victim personal statement (VPS) gives you the chance to tell the police and the court what support you might need and how the crime has affected you (physically, emotionally or financially).

You do not have to provide one, the police will continue with your case without a VPS.

If you do provide a VPS it will become part of the case papers and may be used by the court upon sentencing or considering whether the defendant should be granted bail.
